Little Tokyo Service Center is a social service and community development organization that improves the lives of individuals and families and promotes the rich heritage of Southern California’s ethnic communities.

WELCOME

It’s an honor and privilege to introduce myself as the new President of Little Tokyo Service Center’s Board of Directors. As Dick Kaku steps down after four years of dedicated service, I am both thankful for his generous leadership and grateful for the opportunity to build upon his example.

LTSC’s mission immediately resonated with me upon my introduction to the organization years ago by past LTSC Board President and Little Tokyo giant, Alan Nishio. And as a Japanese American woman, an Angeleno, and a nonprofit professional, I connected deeply with LTSC’s vision.

While its rich history and depth of programs and services are remarkable in their own right, I was most impressed with the organization’s staunch values, unwavering spirit, and heroic staff. I saw this in action when the pandemic hit – how brilliant minds and big hearts nimbly developed thoughtful, innovative solutions to meet the critical needs of clients, residents, and the community. And I continue to see it now, as we tackle urgent and complex issues, including the housing crisis and suicide prevention.

In 2022, I witnessed LTSC begin to expand from a local service provider to a visionary industry leader – applying over 40 years of expertise to new ventures, sharing wisdom with neighboring communities, and amplifying its voice to impact larger systems and policies – all executed in true LTSC fashion, values-first, with boots firmly planted on the ground.

On behalf of the Board of Directors, I’m truly honored to help lead this organization through its fifth decade of creating positive change for people and places.

As you read this report, I hope you immerse yourself in the inspiring stories, take pride in how you’ve supported our mission and look forward to the positive change we’ll continue to achieve, together.

Sincerely,

CLAIRE KITAYAMA
Board President,
Little Tokyo Service Center

LTSC’s Paul I. Terasaki Budokan community facility celebrated its grand opening in 2022, hosting diverse programming including basketball, comedy improvisation, taiko and more. Art Ishii, Head Instructor of Matsubayashi Ryu Karate Dojo, leads a karate class for all ages and skill levels in the Budokan gym.
Walking into Paul I. Terasaki Budokan, it’s easy to tell that it’s a beloved place. Children’s artwork lines the walls and the air is filled with the steady beat of taiko drums or the flowing rhythm of hula music on any given day. Artifacts from the community’s rich history await curious visitors in display cases depicting the project’s 30-year journey.

Thousands gathered from across the region to celebrate with culturally-rich performances, speeches from those integral to Budokan’s success, youth games, martial art demonstrations, tributes and more, including NBA legend and Basketball Hall of Famer, Jerry West, who reminded the community what can happen when we work hard and dream big.

Many of those who had seen the project through from beginning to end soaked in the celebration with pride and satisfaction. Former LTSC Board President, Debra Nakatomi, had tears in her eyes as she walked through the gym, reveling in the manifestation of the dream she helped chase for decades. “It felt like 30 years of pent up demand was unleashed in one day,” said Ryan Lee, Director of Terasaki Budokan. “I’m excited to see Budokan serve as a foothold to ensure our community’s spirit will endure for future generations.”

Kent Yoshimura, the artist behind Budokan’s “To Catch the Moon” mural, shared, “Having lived near and in Little Tokyo, and having been a visitor of Little Tokyo all my life, I do believe that this is one of the most important buildings here. It’s extremely important to have a space where all of us can gather and feel like we’re part of something.”

The decades-long dream of bringing community space to the Downtown LA neighborhood was finally realized when Budokan celebrated its Grand Opening in 2022. Located within one of only four remaining official Japantowns in the US, Budokan’s opening cemented LTSC’s vision of vibrant community engagement, with the “home court for all” providing opportunities for visitors to connect with the Little Tokyo neighborhood and Japanese American culture.

“‘It’s extremely important to have a space where all of us can gather and feel like we’re part of something.’

For Jackie Hernandez, moving into Casa Heiwa with her family at the age of 5 was life-changing.

LTSC’s affordable housing provided programs and services to Jackie and her family, fostering a sense of support and belonging throughout her upbringing. Now, at 26, not only has she discovered her passion for working with kids, but she’s also formed a support network that surpasses anything she believes she could have found elsewhere.

“A core part of LTSC’s resident services is providing youth with opportunities and experiences to allow them to create their own paths forward,” said Nancy Alcaraz, LTSC Director of Resident Services, highlighting LTSC’s commitment to empowering youth.

“Getting LTSC’s help impacted me in a really positive way. They make us feel like we’re family.”

After attending the Casa Heiwa after-school program as a child and the summer mentorship program as a teen, Jackie’s journey came full circle when Nancy encouraged her to apply for an AmeriCorps internship with LTSC’s Mi CASA after-school program – an opportunity to give back to the very organization that played such a pivotal role in her life.

“My favorite part of my AmeriCorps position was working with the kids. I looked forward to the hands-on experience, being present in the after-school program, and helping the kids with their homework,” Jackie shared. For 10 months, Jackie worked with youth residents from LTSC’s housing, often leading art workshops that eventually sparked her interest in pursuing an art therapy career. “I think if I didn’t have LTSC, I wouldn’t have the same support. Being here for so many years and getting all their help impacted me in a really positive way. They make us feel like we’re family.”

FILLING SILENCE WITH COMMUNITY

Shirley remembers a time, not that long ago, when silence filled the majority of her days.

When she first moved to JCI Gardens in the South Bay nine years ago, she was eager to settle into the independent style of living offered by the senior housing facility managed by LTSC. But when the pandemic hit, she suddenly found herself grappling with the effects of confinement and limited socialization, witnessing the same among many of her neighbors who, like her, live alone.

A few months before the pandemic, knowing the benefits of keeping seniors socially connected, LTSC welcomed Cheryl to the JCI Gardens staff as the new Senior Activities Coordinator. And while Cheryl initially pivoted the new programming to keep seniors safe, activities have now returned in-person, something Shirley takes advantage of every chance she gets.

She and her fellow residents enjoy access to a weekly program of recreational activities, social gatherings, and group outings, with many benefiting from the ability to communicate in their native language. Shirley looks forward to spending time with a group of fellow Japanese-speaking women, who she connects with over shared life experiences and health tips.

“I try to participate as much as possible. If we didn’t have these activities, I never would have talked to or known any of these ladies, I would have just stayed up in my room.”

“Sitting around a table with coffee and pastries in hand every Friday morning, they laugh and smile as they reminisce about where they’ve been and how, through everything, they’ve come to be together now.”

LTSC’s senior activities have allowed Shirley to once again feel connected with her community. As the program goes on, and she continues to stay active and engaged with her newfound friends through activities like chair yoga and raijo taiso, she hopes that others will join and see the immense value of what the program has to offer.
The ability to call East Hollywood “home” has grown more challenging in recent years for many local residents struggling to make ends meet.

Accelerated gentrification and for-profit housing have displaced family-owned businesses and individuals, threatening the vibrant diversity and culture that shape the neighborhood’s identity. But in the midst of this rapidly-changing landscape stands a testament to the determination of a community worth fighting for.

In 2022, LTSC broke ground on our largest housing project to date to build 187 affordable units at the Vermont/Santa Monica Metro Station in East Hollywood. The transit-oriented development will include community-serving retail space, prioritizing local small businesses as tenants, as well as on-site supportive services for residents via Housing Works.

“We want to ensure a positive impact on the neighborhood’s health, while also doing our part to alleviate the housing crisis,” said Debbie Chen, LTSC Director of Real Estate Development. “LTSC is taking a holistic and responsible approach towards community development by collaborating with the East Hollywood Neighborhood Council and individual community organizations to ensure the neighborhood sees their needs represented.”

Jillian Schultz, Corresponding Secretary of the East Hollywood Neighborhood Council, commended LTSC for its approach, as opposed to for-profit developers. “What I’ve witnessed LTSC doing is the complete opposite of what every other developer is doing. They’ve allowed for things like deep community engagement, returning to meetings over and over again, listening to the concerns that are being expressed by the community. To me, it’s a model for the type of development that should be happening all over Los Angeles,” she shared.

LTSC’s vision for SMV goes beyond bricks and mortar. It embodies our mission to strengthen communities of color and support low-income residents, wherever the need exists.
When Ashley (they/them) uprooted their life in Los Angeles to earn their Master’s degree in Art Therapy and Counseling in Pennsylvania, they had no way of predicting they would find themselves unhoused while juggling school, an internship, and two jobs.

As Ashley struggled to find their footing, they sought out therapy to help them through the tough transition. But their search brought up options that were too expensive, difficult to travel to, or with therapists that didn’t share Ashley’s cultural background or identity. As a second-generation, non-binary Asian American student, Ashley was grappling with feeling “othered” in their predominantly white and cis-gendered surroundings – and wanted to talk with someone who would understand.

Fortunately, Ashley found CT Stream, a Changing Tides (CT) initiative launched in 2022 that aims to make mental health services more accessible for young people in the AANHPI (Asian American Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander) community and beyond. At no cost to them, Ashley was matched with an art therapist from CT Stream’s directory of culturally-sensitive providers and completed ten therapy sessions. Having a shared identity with their therapist allowed them to finally feel heard and understood. And with the added benefit of CT Stream’s virtual care option, they enjoyed the flexibility they needed, without sacrificing the quality of care they deserve.

“When working with a therapist who has a similar background to me meant that I didn’t have to explain any of my traumas, or my identities, or why those are so impactful to me. This program has been so important in helping validate my experiences and making sure that I’m getting what I need,” Ashley shared. “It really changes your life to have a team there who can truly support you.”

Ashley’s experience has not only given them tools to handle life’s many curveballs, but also reassurance from knowing that Changing Tides is dedicated to promoting culturally inclusive mental health resources for people like them.

Matthew Yonemura, CT Program Coordinator, said, “The need for better access to mental health services in our community has never been clearer. Asians are the least likely racial group to seek mental health support, and suicide is currently the number one cause of death for AANHPI youth. CT Stream aims to not only provide access to mental health services, but to ensure that those services are tailored to the specific needs of our community, whether that means in-language care or culturally-sensitive providers.”
For Yuka and Malina, becoming first-time business owners wasn’t easy.

In 2021, the pair took over Kuragami Florist in Little Tokyo from Masami and Mary Onoue, who ran the business since 1984. With assistance from LTSC small business counselor Mariko Lochridge, Kuragami Florist found new life with the next generation of entrepreneurs. Yuka and Malina were determined to preserve the shop’s 39-year legacy while adapting to modern times. With a loyal client base and a debt-free lease, they rebranded the shop as Little Tokyo Florist, proudly highlighting its location-based identity. However, as the pandemic set in, they faced a flurry of setbacks like supply chain issues, inflation, and reduced consumer spending. But, out of troubling times came innovative change. With Mariko’s guidance, they were able to generate new revenue streams by launching a joint merchandise venture with another local small business, CRFT by Maki. To their delight, this venture ignited their passion for community collaboration and placed it at the core of their refreshed business model.

“We’re grateful to LTSC and Mariko for helping us continue to do what we love.”

Yuka
Owner, Little Tokyo Florist

“I want to carry on Kuragami Florist’s legacy, but we can’t be doing the same thing as 30 years ago. It’s fun for us to try something new, especially something we couldn’t do by ourselves. Collaborating lets us help each other, and that’s what community really is. We’re teaching each other and keeping our Little Tokyo community going, together. That’s been a great experience through the collaborations that Mariko helped us launch in partnership with CRFT by Maki,” Yuka said.

As Little Tokyo Florist prepares to celebrate its 40th anniversary in 2024, LTSC is proud to have supported them every step of the way. Yuka shared, “From the ownership change to securing financing during the pandemic to cultivating collaborations among the Little Tokyo small business community, we’re grateful to LTSC and Mariko for helping us continue to do what we love.”

2022 HIGHLIGHTS
YOU MADE THIS POSSIBLE!

The Paul I. Terasaki Budokan celebrated its Grand Opening, realizing the decades-long dream of bringing the community center to Little Tokyo.

Changing Tides hosted the inaugural Ripple Effect: Walk for Suicide Prevention, raising funds for mental health support while honoring those lost to suicide.

Assemblymember Al Muratsuchi recognized Changing Tides as a “2022 Nonprofit Program of the Year” for its support of mental health in the AAPI community.

With support from organizations like LTSC, ballot Measure ULA (United to House LA) passed, significantly increasing resources for affordable housing development throughout the city.

Community engagement with Skid Row ahead of the Umeya housing development combined efforts from LTSC’s homeless services, real estate team, community organizers and resident artist.

Four LTSC residents attended the NeighborWorks Community Leadership Institute in North Carolina, strengthening the voices of our resident leaders while making plans for positive community change.

Santa Monica Vermont Apartments, a 187-unit affordable housing development, broke ground at the Metro station in East Hollywood.

LA City Council approved the Legacy Business Program, incorporating LTSC recommendations, to support long-standing small businesses impacted by gentrification and displacement.

Budokan became home to 15 regular programs including Mi CASA after school program and J-Town Senior Connection.

Sake on the Rocks successfully returned in person to the JACCC Plaza with over 700 attendees.

Thank you for all that you do to support and preserve the culture and heritage of the Japanese-American community.

Thank you for helping the community with providing the information most required.
Thank you for the Alzheimer's Caregiver's Support Group.

Thank you for the loving care and creative vision that you provide our community.
Thank you for your continued efforts in making our community a better place!
Great to finally go to Terasaki Budokan!

Thank you for your great work in the JA community.
Very encouraged by the movement to remove the shame that's associated with mental health.

Thank you for letting us be a part of this.
